FIRM DESCRIPTION

Eckhardt Trading Company was founded in 1991 by William Eckhardt in Chicago. Eckhardt is a research driven investment manager with a systematic, technical and evolutionary approach to global markets. The manager employs a variety of short term and pattern recognition strategies with an average trade length of under 10 days. Since its founding, the firm has prioritised ongoing research and development, with a dedicated research team that has been working together for more than a decade. William Eckhardt has been a pioneer in the systematic space since the 1980's, culminating in a research partnership with the University of Chicago.

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE & STRATEGY DESCRIPTOR

The investment objective of the Fund is to achieve long-term capital growth. Please refer to the latest prospectus and the relevant KIID of the Fund for more information.

The strategy uses market volatility as a key metric to identify and capture alpha by trading several models across multiple time horizons and volatility regimes. Eckhardt's unique analysis and understanding of volatility characteristics employs strategies across three system groups: 1) Short-term volatility trend captures price changes across short-term time frames in periods of changing volatility; 2) Pattern recognition uses proprietary models to seek contrarian profit opportunities during periods of consolidating or reversing markets; and 3) Risk-off alpha systems aim to capture alpha in periods of higher volatility, particularly in equity markets. The program uses a different set of signals to trade a select subset of commodities which Eckhardt has identified as behaving differently to other key markets. The Eckhardt program is based on 40 years of pioneering research from Bill Eckhardt and his team, applying evolutionary computing and risk-based utility theory with in-depth volatility analysis. The current portfolio has an average holding period of less than 10 days.

COMMENTARY

February was a strong, consistently positive month, bringing the year-to-date returns firmly back into positive territory. Every market sector was positive as were all system groups except risk-off alpha, which was primed for some short-term downside action. The portfolio of systems worked well together in the ranges of volatility experienced, not challenged by the sharp reversals of last month. Positive sentiment about vaccines and fiscal stimulus provided long side opportunities, while inflationary pressure gave short side opportunities in Fixed Income.

Commodities continued to deliver strongly through February. Follow-through in silver from last month continued, with gold contributing at month-end. Added gains from industrial metals, particularly copper, made metals the best performing sector. Energy was a close second with overall long-side gains, particularly in heating oil and the crude markets. Rallies in soft commodities benefitted long positions in cotton, sugar and cocoa.

Short positions in fixed income products made gains as markets began pricing in higher inflation due to stimulus measures as governments fight the economic effects of coronavirus.

Equities were choppy but provided gains in both directions, on the long side as some stock indices rallied to new highs mid-month and then later on the short side as equities sold off near the end of the month.
